

Impressions of a Disillusioned Suitor

You've impressed me as somebody with the goal in life
To extricate your debts with cash to subsidize your plight.

Though you're sloth and improvident, you don a good mask
To cover that you're looking for some man to ease life's tasks.

You have the soul of stagnate muddy water.
You don't want love, just ample fortunes to spend.

Doff your mask of selfishness and analyze you mind
For if you choose to rearrange it I just may change mine

Change your low ways and live life without wanting
Don't use your love for thieving and for deceit.

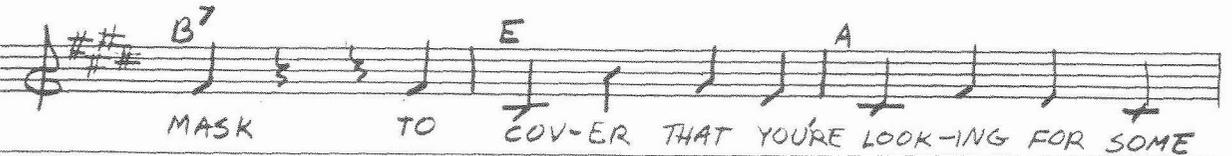

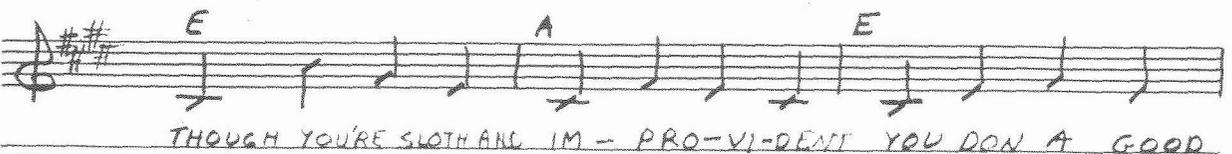

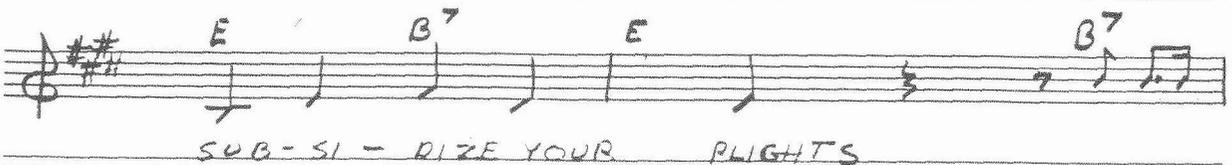

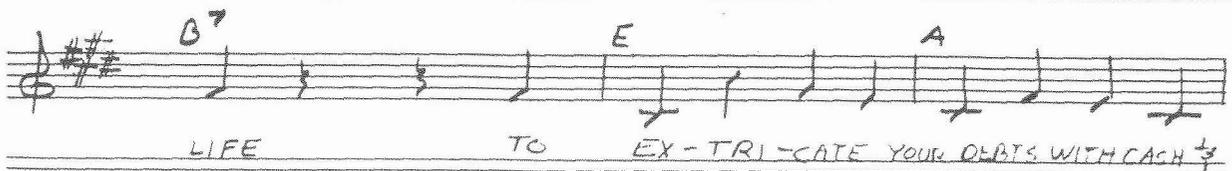

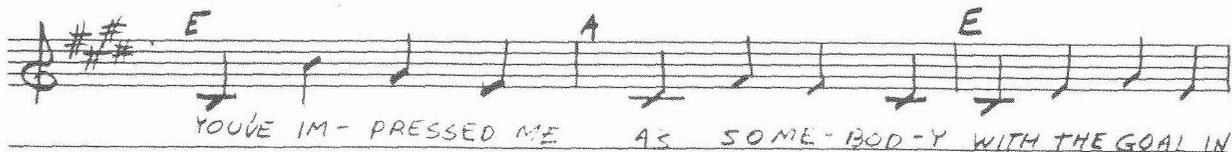

Elevate your lowly soul and peer into your mind
You may become inebriated by that which you find.
